

INDIANAPOLIS 2012

REGISTRATION

the Conference
for FOOD
PROTECTION

APRIL 14-18 • THE HYATT REGENCY • INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA

Dear Members and Colleagues,

I cordially invite you to join us in Indianapolis for the 2012 biennial Conference for Food Protection.

The Conference continues to be a valuable and timely necessity in enhancing our nation's food safety efforts. The Conference's unique format, built solidly on partnership and consensus-building among academia, industry, consumers and local, state, and federal regulators, provides a special opportunity for those in attendance to 'make a difference' and help to improve and unify food safety efforts nationwide.

As much as we've accomplished to date, we continue to see new and emerging foodborne diseases, foodborne outbreaks attributed to well-known but not well-controlled pathogens, and large volume food recalls; all which serve to remind us that our food safety efforts must continue.

The Executive Board, the Local Arrangements Committee, and the CFP committees have spent invaluable time and resources to make the 2012 Conference productive and meaningful. Additionally, the Program Committee has worked diligently to provide a timely and meaningful food safety workshop for participants. I applaud their efforts and am grateful for their dedication and contributions.

Attendance at the 2012 biennial meeting will give you the opportunity to take a proactive step in actively helping to protect our nation's food supply. Everyone's involvement and participation is needed in this effort. Experience how you can make a difference! I look forward to seeing you in Indianapolis!

*Sheri Morris, Chair
Conference for Food Protection*

Welcome from the Local Arrangements Committee (LAC)!

We are excited and eager for the Conference for Food Protection 2012 attendees to see and experience our great city! Of course, most people know Indianapolis as the home of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, host to the Indy 500 Race, which is still the greatest spectacle in racing. On the other hand, folks may know us from the Indianapolis Colts who were the 2006 Super Bowl champions or even the Indiana Pacers. Then again our city is also known as the amateur sports capitol of the nation hosting several final championship events for college sports over the last 25 years. Indianapolis is further known as the home of Presidents William Henry Harrison and Benjamin Harrison and famous author/poet James Whitcomb Riley.

What you may not know is how easily accessible the city is by highway or the airport. It is quick drive from the airport to the beautiful Hyatt Regency Hotel in downtown Indy. Once downtown there are numerous fine dining establishments within 1-2 blocks of the hotel, including the famous St. Elmo's Steakhouse and Peyton Manning's Harry and Izzy's! In addition, we are the home for the NCAA headquarters, the Eiteljorg Museum for American Indian history and western art, and other equally impressive sights like the State Capitol, Indiana History Center and Lucas Oil Stadium. The LAC has worked diligently to help the CFP 2012 be an event to be remembered and we are looking forward to hosting the conference, which incidentally is shortly after the Indy hosted Super Bowl XLVI (46)!

On behalf of the LAC members, we are hoping you will attend and please let the LAC know of anything that might make it a better conference.

*Scott Gilliam, Chair, Indianapolis Local Arrangements Committee
Stephanie Mohn, Co-Chair – Industry
Richard Linton, PhD, Co-Chair – Academia
Kelli Whiting, Co-Chair – Local Health Departments*
